

★ Rick Perry | continued ★

16 hours of organic chemistry, they pointed out to me that I probably didn't want to be a veterinarian.

So would it be fair to say that you and science don't get along so well?

No. After I graduated college, I had a year of the most technical aerodynamics and physics that you need to be an air force pilot. They weren't cream-puff studies. I have a pretty good handle on science from that perspective.

Some of our recent presidents have admitted to experimenting with drugs. What about you?

No, ma'am. Not unless you call caffeine a drug. Or cold beer or whiskey.

In the past, you've said that "unless my family is at gunpoint, I will not go to Washington, D.C." If you're elected, do you plan to govern from Texas?

Look, millions of Americans who've served the country didn't want to go where they were sent, but it was their duty. I don't consider this any different.

Governor, how would you make the White House more like Texas?

We'd have Blue Bell ice cream and Hill Country barbecue. 🍷

READ MORE FROM RICK PERRY

P At PARADE'S 2012 campaign HQ, find the full interview and get answers to these questions: Did Rick Perry really shoot that coyote? What did he and Donald Trump discuss over dinner? And who's on his iPod? Plus, share your comments on his candidacy and the interview, at Parade.com/election2012.

INTRODUCING OUR NEW SLOW KETTLE® STYLE SOUPS.

It's amazing what soup can do.®

Visit us at PARADE.COM