Finley Elementary School Music Fair

"You are a maker of musical instruments, a master craftsman who has trained for many years as an apprentice and journey person. Now, you have reached the highest level of skill Master Builder.

You have been received a very special commission. You have been asked to create a new and special instrument using your knowledge of musical instruments. The patron has requested a decorated instrument of high quality, made from the best materials you can provide.

You know that only the finest workmanship will be acceptable. What will you create? "at will it look like?"

You will have to begin work immediately in order to meet the deadline provided by your patron.

These are the instructions fourth and fifth graders attending Finley Elementary School recently received in their music class. Following the conclusion of a unit which encompassed both the different instrument families and the patronage system which supported the arts and artists for hundreds of years, students were challenged to design and produce an instrument under similar circumstances.

Additional criteria included.

1. The instrument must be a Wind, Percussion or String.
2. The instrument must have a name.
3. You must be able to play your instrument and it must make a sound.
4. You must write a paragraph about your instrument and how it makes a sound. Include the words pitch, tone quality, and volume in your paragraph.
5. You must demonstrate your instrument for the class.

Following the demonstration of instruments in regular music classes, all instruments were displayed at school for other students, teachers and visitors. On Thursday, March 10, all instruments were judged by Dyer County High School Band Director, Justin Brown and Finley Elementary teacher Susan Dunahoo. First, second and third place awards were given in each class and Overall Winners were selected from the class awards. An award was also given for the Most Creative Entry.

Finley Elementary School Principal is Dr. Mary Ellen Watkins and Music Teacher is Laura McCulloch.
